Karen Burke

Karen has won several art contests, and her work has been featured in numerous high-profile magazines, including Ink and National Geographic, one of her proudest moments and greatest accomplishments as an artist. Out of thousands of submitted entries, Karen's photo of her parents in a loving embrace made it into the magazine. The heart-warming human print depicts Karen's father comforting her sick mother with a kiss on her shoulder and compassionately captures their deep love for each other.

Speaking of love, Karen would love to meet Mexican surrealist artist Frida Kahlo, who has become an icon for women's inner strength, courage in the face of adversity and remaining genuine and true to one's convictions – all unique qualities that resonate with Karen.
