Steven's secret to producing such prolific fantasy cartoon prints involves the simple process of returning to the basics each and every time he designs.

Reading and looking at art allows for continued inspiration, which then activates his old-school technique of figure drawing and sketching.

He then adds pops of vibrant and vivid color to complete the character, hero or image.

What's more, Steven adheres to the underlying mission that art is not about the best software or hardware, but rather, it's about working diligently, putting in the time and showing continual dedication to one's craft.

In fact, even though he has achieved a myriad of artistic milestones, Steven does not give credit to any particular professional accomplishment since he is already looking forward to his next, big, creative challenge.

A master with an old school mentality and new world techniques, Steven recharges his batteries in nature by hiking and walking.
