

Jordan Jones

Jordan Jones, a.k.a. JJ the Artist creates expressive, exciting and thought-provoking art prints by painting with his heart and soul to capture the divine essence and inner truth of each subject. He has the innate ability to entice the viewer into seeing the magic, beauty and love of the world deriving inspiration from Black culture, sports, hip hop, 90s cartoons and anime.

Born and raised in New Britain, CT, Jordan was always naturally creative, winning multiple art contests throughout his academic career. He began to take his craft seriously in college and changed his major from Math Education to Fine Arts. After graduating from the University of Connecticut with a degree in Fine Arts, he worked as a graphic designer. It wasn't until 2015 that Jordan began painting and displaying his creative talents in art shows. Since then, his work has been featured in shows across Connecticut, New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Los Angeles and Miami.

Jordan's style is realistic and dramatic. Much of his work is portraits of well-known figures and animals, though he often ventures into other subjects, concepts and even the abstract. His inner truth art prints stand out in the way that Jordan captures the subject's personality through the eyes and makes the viewer feel as if the subjects are looking right at them, ready to walk out of the canvas.

One of Jordan's primary artistic influences is Jean-Michel Basquiat, an American artist known for his graffiti and street art.
